

Quardricos Driskell is manager of the legislative and political affairs for the American Urological Association (AUA), the premier medical association for the advancement of urologic patient care. Before the AUA, he worked for two patient voluntary health associations where he advanced the patient voice into policy and research deliberations through services to Congress, Food and Drug Administration (FDA), Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), and National Institutes of Health (NIH). Based in Washington, DC, Quardricos represents the AUA's interest before the federal government. During Quardricos' typical workday, he engages Members of Congress, Capitol Hill staffers, and other stakeholders in the government to develop and progress laws that affect health care. He is an adjunct professor of legislative politics at the

George Washington University Graduate School of Political Management. He is an opinion contributor for the Washington D.C. top political news site, The Hill. His work and insights have been featured in several national and international news outlets including the New York Times, Voice of America, NBC News, MSNBC, Religion News Service, the BBC, and Showtime's Documentary, "The Fourth Estate." An ASAE member, he serves on the Government Relations and Advocacy Professionals Advisory Council.
